John T. Carter House
101 Cherry Hill Road
Rocks vicinity
Private

ca. 1905-1910

The John T. Carter House is a good example of the early 20th century transitional phase in vernacular architecture. The polygonal bay and veranda-like porch are elements found in late 19th century houses. The overall form is, however, compact and volumetric with few decorative frills, reflecting the economy and efficiency of design which came to typify the 20th century house. The Carter House may be contrasted with the Ignatius Rutledge House (HA-787), a late 19th century house which is located on the same property.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The John T. Carter House is a 2-1/2 story frame house built about 1905-1910 with a shed porch and aluminum siding which stands on a hill east of Rocks Road (Maryland Route 24) and Deer Creek about 1/2 mile northeast of the Ferncliff subdivision near Rocks State Park, Harford County, Maryland. The main elevation faces north.

The gable roof ridge is on a north-south axis so that the north elevation is dominated by the gable end of the house. The first and second floors have four bays and the top half-story has two bays. A shed porch extends across the north elevation and most of the west, ending with a 2-1/2 story projecting polygonal bay with an overhanging gabled dormer on the top level. The entire exterior of the house, including the porch parapet and roof supports are covered in white aluminum siding. The door and window frames are plain and most have exterior storm windows. The sash is mainly 1/1. A brick chimney is located in the center of the house. On the south elevation is a shed addition, also covered with aluminum siding. The foundation is stone and the main roof is slate. The porch roof is modern composition material.

About 30 yards east of the house is a frame wagon shed or garage, apparently contemporary with the house. The structural timbers are machine sawn and the vertical siding has traces of blue paint. The roof is slate. Adjoining the shed on the south is a modern concrete block tractor shed.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The John T. Carter House is a good example of the early 20th century transitional phase in vernacular architecture. The polygonal bay and veranda-like porch are elements found in late 19th century houses. The overall form is, however, compact and volumetric with few decorative frills, reflecting the economy and efficiency of design which came to typify the 20th century house. The Carter House may be contrasted with the Ignatius Rutledge House (HA-787), a late 19th century house which is located on the same property.

NOTE: HA-783 was originally assigned to the Harold Baker House. This was later duplicated by HA-1559, James Baker House (NR). Number 783 was therefore cancelled and reassigned to the John T. Carter House.
